Sunrise showdown for street occupiers

► Sleeping bags, tarps are now illegal in Zuccotti Park ► Protesters vow they will form human chain to prevent cops from entering park

This protest is trashed.

Police Commissioner Ray Kelly told Occupy Wall Street protesters that after the park is power-washed and scrubbed down Friday morning at 7 a.m., sleeping bags, coolers and other gear will not be allowed back into the park.

Zuccotti Park owners, Brookfield Properties, papered the park with the new rules Thursday. But protesters say they will prevent cops and cleaners alike from stepping foot in the park by creating a human shield around its perimeter starting at 6 a.m. Friday.

"We've already decided that they're not going to come in here," said Stacey Hessler, 38, a protester from Florida. "We're going to lock arms and not let them in."

Deputy NYPD Commissioner Paul Browne said Brookfield created the new rules against camping supplies. If protesters defy the regulations, they could be arrested for trespassing or disorderly conduct, he warned.

"They literally said we can't occupy," said Diego Ibanez, 22, a community organizer from Utah. "If they come, we're going to resist. Those who are OK with being arrested will stay here. Those who won't will be witnesses."

Protesters frantically cleaned the park on Thursday afternoon, hoping that their last-minute cleanup will prevent Brookfield's private cleaning staff from coming in.

Weather woes

Protesters say they'll fight Bloomberg to stay at the park, but admit they may lose to Mother Nature.

► "The weather, besides the constant harassment from the city and NYPD, is our biggest enemy," said Matt Erickson, 27, a carpenter from Iowa.

► The cold temperatures and constant drizzle the last few days have made several protesters pick up and leave. "People woke up this morning shaking and freezing," said Spirit Fox, 18, a student from New York.

► Piles of personal belongings mixed with trash on Thursday evening where protesters camped out in Zuccotti Park.

"We're not going to move — it's a trick for us to leave. I would love to see a human wall outside our community."

DIEGO IBANEZ

"This isn't a party; it's civil unrest. It's my right to stay warm, dry and healthy."

City remembers fallen 9/11 heroes

Mayor Michael Bloomberg laid a wreath Thursday at the Police Memorial Wall, where nine new names of New York City police officers were added on Thursday. Those nine officers became ill after working at Ground Zero and later died. "The nine men we honor gave their lives participating in the largest rescue and recovery operation in the city's history," said Commissioner Ray Kelly. • METRO/AB

PTSD reports increase among 9/11 responders

As the years since 9/11 go by, the number of NYPD officers reporting post-traumatic stress disorder have dramatically increased instead of going down, according to new study results discussed Thursday.

In the study of about 4,000 police officers interviewed four to six years after the attacks, 17 percent showed probable PTSD. This was double the number of eight percent reporting PTSD two or three years after 9/11, said Dr. Rosemarie Bowler, a psychology professor at San Francisco State University.

"The overall rate of probable PTSD in police worsened over time," Bowler said while presenting the findings at a conference on 9/11 health in Lower Manhattan.

the increase, in 2001 and 2002 fewer responders sought help because they did not think they needed it, according to the city Department of Health's Dr. Robert Brackbill. But as the years went by, Bowler found more officers reporting that memories of 9/11 continued to haunt them.

One new therapy now in use involves virtual reality, said Dr. JoAnn Difede, a psychology professor at Weill Cornell Medical College.

Patients wear goggles and headgear, which takes them through a virtual tour of the World Trade Centers and their collapse.

"It creates this sense of immersion, that you're there again," she said, which helps them summon and address memories.

Subway slasher sentence delayed

NEW YORK. Godfrey Molemoohi could face 20 years in prison for attacking three people in a subway station in September of last year. He was convicted of the crimes in June, but his sentencing was postponed Thursday. Prosecutors say he approached a woman and said, "I want to touch you" at the F subway station at Second Avenue and Houston Street and then punched her in the neck. He also attacked a man who tried to help the victim, slashing him with a box cutter. Molemoohi also banged a second female victim's head against brick wall. • METRO/AB

LOST IN THE CORN MAZE

When I heard this week about that family in Massachusetts getting so lost in a corn maze that they called 911, two questions came to mind: How is it possible that they could negotiate a cell phone contract, but were outwitted by a grain crop? And why does this story remind me so much of D.C.?

The second one I can answer: Because in terms of the economy, this city is filled with befuddled politicians trying to find a way out — and bending a lot of ears in the process.

President Obama has just spent weeks hopping on hay bales around the country to explain his jobs plan, but all he's harvested is a bumper crop of complaints on Capitol Hill. I can imagine him and Harry Reid looking over the bill like an old, rusty tractor. "I don't know, Mr. President. We might be able to salvage a part or two, but mainly it's just going for scrap."

On the Republican side, every day seems to bring another scheme for lowering unemployment and balancing the budget: incentives for business, tax reform, less regulation, more manufacturing. I think the latest involves selling San Francisco to the Canadians.

Herman Cain, the pizza baron, is trying to play rainmaker with his 9-9-9 plan, which calls for a 9 percent income tax, 9 percent corporate tax and 9 percent sales tax. (I assume we'll also have to tip if it's delivered in 30 minutes or less.) He says it will streamline the tax code, produce as much revenue as the current system and provide for substantial growth to boot. Problem is, economic analysts see so many variables in his plan that a forecast of what might really happen could just as accurately be taken from the Old Farmer's Almanac. "Yep, here 'tis, on page twenty-seven. A balanced budget!"

And truthfully, that is the reason all these political types are lost in the corn maze. The problems in the economy, and the challenge of creating jobs, are genuinely daunting. Even the most promising notions are fraught with uncertainty.

Come to think of it, maybe being lost in a corn maze would not be bad. At least for the next 13 months.

BlackBerry does damage control

- RIM execs go on PR offensive over global outages
- Not good for firm that seems to be losing out to Apple

Research In Motion has fixed the root cause of a global disruption of BlackBerry services and is still working to clear a backlog of delayed messages, its CEOs said on Thursday, hoping to control the damage to RIM four days after the outage began.

The chief executives — Mike Lazaridis and Jim Balsillie — apologized for the system-wide failure that left millions of BlackBerry users without e-mail, instant messaging and browsing, and said the company would work to regain their customers' trust.

"Our inability to quickly fix this has been frustrating," Lazaridis said, sounding contrite. "We are taking immediate and aggressive steps to minimize risk of this happening again."

Asked about whether RIM would pay compensation to carriers or enterprises that pay a monthly fee for its gold-standard messaging services, Balsillie suggested the company would consider that question in the coming days.

"Our focus has been 100 percent on getting the systems up and running. ... That's been our focus ... And that's something we're going to focus on now."

A number of providers around the world have already said they would compensate their customers over the lost service.

The outage and sluggish communications with customers have fanned rising dissatisfaction with RIM.

► Steve Martin, Owen Wilson and Jack Black – stars of 'The Big Year' – discuss birding, the people who have a passion for it, and why they don't

While they may be gifted in many other areas, comic actors Steve Martin, Owen Wilson and Jack Black all lack the skill to be a birder — birder being the formal term for an avid bird watcher. All three portray avian enthusiasts in their new film "The Big Year," but they openly admit to their lack of enthusiasm for our feathered friends.

"We did a lot of extensive research," says Martin. "Meaning that Jack did and then we asked him about it."

While Black is more modest about his preparation for the role, he adds that becoming a birder is more a matter of inspired vocation than choice.

Q&A

You're all funny guys. Did you pull any pranks on each other on set?

- Martin: I'm not a prankster.
- Wilson: Come on, Steve, on April Fools Day — you wait for that day.
- Martin: On April Fools I go around changing people's calendars to the second. When I hear about a prank-filled set, I just think, "Ugh I'm so glad I'm not in that movie."

- Black: Every time I'm on a press junket, I always regret that I didn't pull some kind of George Clooney prank so that I would have a prank to talk about later. We really missed an opportunity there, guys.

"You could read about birding and do research about birding but you can't really decide you want to be a birder," he says. "You have to have the compulsion, the obsession with birds. I don't share that with the birding society at large but it was fun to hang out with some birders and watch them in action, because it's kind of remarkable. They'll be able to spot something really far away and they'll say, 'That's the Mongolian goose!'"

"The Big Year" takes its title from an actual competition in which birders attempt to see the most species of birds within a set geographical location in one year or less. For Wilson, who plays the reigning champ of the previous Big Year, the sporting spirit of

Wilson and Black debate the value of the American Eagle

Wilson: One of the highlights for me was seeing an eagle. Then it turns out, we saw thousands of eagles, so it lost its excitement. But the first time we saw an eagle, we were filming in Canada. But then it was odd to see that eagles are sort of like buzzards. They're scavengers.

Black: How dare you? The American Eagle!

Wilson: But at the dump was where we saw the most eagles. They were just hanging out. They were —

Black: I don't like where this conversation is going. Can we change the subject? I'm very patriotic.

the three men vying for the top spot suited his own competitive streak.

"I think I can get very competitive about some things. Growing up with two brothers, we were all intensely competitive with anything — ping-pong, with skipping a stone, anything," he says. "That part of the character I can relate to. I understood where everybody [in the story] was coming from and that's what I like when I read [a script]."

'The Big Year'

Director: David Frankel
Cast: Steve Martin, Owen Wilson, Jack Black
Rating: PG
Grade: 00006
Hollywood movies are either designed for big ticket sales or for the critics' approval. Rarely do they satisfy both goals at once. "The Big Year," helmed by "Marley and Me" director David Frankel, tries, with the intensity of the story's intrepid birders, for box office gold. But in making a movie for everybody, they end up with a film that no one can get very excited about.

The humor is toothless. The topic of birders might be fertile ground for all manner of nerdy family pack jokes, birding puns, whatever — it's never fully tapped here. This film was made with a deep respect for the hobby of bird-watching, but perhaps a dollop of irreverence for the mission at hand would've made it a more relateable and enjoyable experience to watch.

Let's give the film a hand

► Kenny Wormald fills Kevin Bacon's big dancing shoes in the remake of the '80s classic 'Footloose' ► The film is a joyous ode to the original

► Miles Teller plays the rhythm-challenged Willard and Kenny Wormald stars as Ren in "Footloose."

Look, before you decry a remake of "Footloose" and figure the Hollywood machine can't do justice to your favorite '80s movie, remember: The original "Footloose" wasn't "Citizen Kane."

The reason "Footloose" had such resonance with people of a certain age was because it was an entertaining movie with a killer soundtrack and pleasing dance moves. It was about kids having a little freedom, a little break from parental tyranny. And then there was a foxy, young Kevin Bacon — a rebel in a red tuxedo. It was a recipe for huge success.

Luckily, the new "Footloose" doesn't stray too far from the original formula.

With a little updating and a little more grit, director Craig Brewer, known for edgier fare such as "Hustle & Flow" and "Black Snake Moan," has created a kick-ass homage. His version covers all of the bases: close-ups on dancing feet, a few of the classic songs and even familiar outfits. It's faithful to the original without being stodgy.

Kenny Wormald, the man who has to fill Bacon's large dancing shoes, does an admirable job in the lead role. He plays the rebel Ren with adorable aplomb. He might not have the limber grace of Bacon, but he gives the dance scenes his all.

Yes, there are moments of pure absurdity (in a time of rampant teen pregnancy, gangs and failing schools, a ban on dancing seems far too quaint) and there might be some cringe-worthy lines, but the heart of "Footloose" — teenagers who just want to be teenagers — isn't lost.

In the first scene, we see that he has a patient locked up in his house, peacefully performing a yoga routine, creating sculptures out of her ripped-up clothes. That placid moment takes revelatory meaning by the film's halfway point.

And that's what makes this film so stunning. Almodovar plays with expectations in a way that's exhilarating and challenging. He leaks clues, little details, for the audience to put together. He doesn't pander with obvious explanations. It's a tremendous film.

Nicolas Cage was robbed ... of his brain!

'Trespass'

Director: Joel Schumacher
Cast: Nicole Kidman, Nicholas Cage, Cam Gigandet

Rating: R Grade: **★★★★

With the last few years of his acting output as evidence, we know that Nicolas Cage has taken almost any role, any role at all, to bring in the big dough. But for the sake of fairness, let's try to forget "Drive Angry" or even "Bangkok Dangerous."

"Trespass" was supposed to be a surefire hit, but just as those other films flopped, it looks like Cage has another stinker on his hands. You can't blame his judgement this time though — with Nicole Kidman co-starring and Joel Schumacher directing, it would seem like a home run. Who knew people so talented could make a movie so bad?

Nic and Nic star as a privileged couple who face a home invasion by calculating crooks, whose motives for robbing them keep changing in soap opera-switcheroo fashion. The main problem with "Trespass" is that it seems to have been written with some by-the-numbers plot-producing monkey that took a bunch of other home-invasion films and cranked out a turkey. ■ HEIDI PATALANO

'Fireflies in the Garden'

Hollywood heavyweights: Julia Roberts, Willem Dafoe, Ryan Reynolds and Emily Watson. Why then, is it getting such an understated release? We'll guess the dark family drama at the center of the story may have something to do with it.

'Father of Invention'

Kevin Spacey stars as an inventor whose life is turned upside down after spending 10 years in prison for making faulty products. His efforts to rebuild his life again with a daughter he barely knows (Camilla Belle) and a job at a box store seem to combat the common tropes of this kind of tale — and of course, John Stamos as a co-star doesn't hurt either.

in rural New England. The warmth and joy of one daughter's impending wedding is overshadowed when her sister brings home an unexpected guest who stirs up buried memories.

The Bateman home is a feast for the eyes, bringing surprising depth to Manhattan Theatre Club's New York City Center basement stage, which often skews flat; however, the sumptuous decor and layered rooms are underutilized. The dialogue is smart, nuanced to suit each personality. And the cast conspires to push past any of the script's other limitations, breathing believability into sometimes implausible actions. However, it's hard to recall that characters still exist once they're off the stage or silent — as if they only come alive through their complex reactions to each other. This is especially problematic due to the fact that one of the main characters is never actually seen.

The play builds tension in an everyday setting with intriguing, slightly "off" moments. We know the

Who lives there?

The story takes place at the home of nearly manic matriarch Maggie (Amy Irving) and passively intellectual dad Lawrence (Mark Blum). Daughter Dinah (Betty Gilpin) returns from college for the weekend to see her sister Althea (Jessica Collins) marry Sandy (Jeremy Shamos). And her date to the event is none other than Daniel (Oscar Isaac), an old family friend — so to speak — who also once resided with the family.

characters have flaws behind their affable social veneers, and it's riveting to try and figure them out — especially with regard to an alluded former "accident." But the delicious anticipation burns itself out during intermission, and a super-short second act feels half-cocked. The post-climactic payout threatens to leave the audience and characters in the same predicament — disengaged.

Little Dragon, big influence

► Swedish band may be popular with listeners, but they're possibly an even bigger hit with other artists

Little Dragon may be the quintessential artist's band. The music that the Swedish four-piece make strikes a nerve with fans, but especially with other musicians. They play conventional rock instruments, but their heavy emphasis on keyboards gives the songs an electronic gloss. Combined with pop and funk sensibilities, the songs sound how Stereolab might if Prince joined the band.

Bassist Fredrik Wallin says sharing ideas with other bands is one of his favorite aspects of playing with Little Dragon. The band has collaborated with Gorillaz, indulged in a side project with Jose Gonzalez, and traded remixes with Unknown Mortal Orchestra, which Wallin says was an especially rewarding experience: "It's a nice way of exchanging energy. It's not a collaboration, but you can add your flavor or get some new flavors for your own stuff."

What actually drew Metro to the band was other artists talking about Little Dragon. Word of mouth has always been a key to finding the best new music, and when the mouths delivering that word are well-respected singers, it's even harder to ignore. When we asked Janelle Monae what she was listening to lately, Little Dragon was one of the first acts she mentioned. And Sameer Gadhia of

Young the Giant, who played this year's MTV Video Music Awards, said Little Dragon would be a dream collaboration, literally.

"I actually had a dream about playing with them last night," he said at the time. "I was hanging out at their house and I started drawing something in a sketchbook, and we just started talking ... We were not really collaborating as much yet, but I guess it was coming into formation."

When we share this anecdote with Wallin, he has a good laugh.

"That sounds fun," he says.

'Ritual Union'

The artwork for Little Dragon's new album, "Ritual Union," is populated with snapshots of couples on their wedding day. And the title track explores the idea of marriage with a slight air of fear. Wallin explains the contrast.

"It's from our family archives of parents, relatives and grandparents," he explains. "It's supposed to be the happiest day of your life, and a lot of our parents are divorced."

Swank sorry for attending accused murderer's party

Hilary Swank is very, very sorry about attending a birthday party for Chechen president and accused human rights violator Ramzan Kadyrov earlier this month, according to The Associated Press. "I deeply regret attending this event. If I had a full understanding of what this event was apparently intended to be, I would never have gone," Swank said in a statement, released Thursday. The Oscar-winning actress claims the invitation was for a concert and made no reference to Kadyrov's birthday. She reportedly received millions for attending.

But here's the thing: The Human Rights Watch, who have taken the actress and the other celebrities who attended — including Seal, Jean-Claude Van Damme, and British violinist Vanessa Mae — to task, say they warned Swank about Kadyrov's activities. She reportedly told them she had declined the invitation, but then went anyway.

Some of the bad spots on Kadyrov's resume? House torchings, torture, abductions and murder. He has also permitted honor killings of his female citizens. Bad form, Swank. But if she gets an invitation from Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to come over for Thanksgiving, hopefully she'll know how to turn him down.

to TMZ. Law enforcement officials claim he hacked into the actress' phone and e-mail using public information. Chaney is also believed to have also targeted Vanessa Hudgens, Ali Larter, Jessica Alba and Christina Aguilera — more than 50 victims in total. If convicted on all counts, he faces 121 years in federal prison.

Could a girl inherit the throne?

Kutcher, Moore: Divorce likely

Ashton Kutcher is reportedly "expecting" Demi Moore to file for divorce after Sara Lee went public with details of her night with the "Two and a Half Men" star, according to Radar Online. "Ashton is absolutely gutted. Ashton had confessed his sexual relationship with Sara to Demi after it happened," a source says. "She's currently consulting with divorce attorneys. Ashton doesn't want her to file for divorce, and is hoping they can work it out. However, Ashton expects that Demi will likely file. He was hoping that Sara wouldn't give any interviews about their sexual encounter, but now she's spilling all the seedy details and it doesn't help matters at all."

A boy for Affleck and Garner?

Ben Affleck and Jennifer Garner are expecting their third child, and sources tell Life & Style that it will be their first boy. Affleck is reportedly thrilled to have a "little sports buddy," the source says. "He can't wait to take his son to baseball games and play catch with him." As for Garner, she "feels like she won't know what to do. She's close to her two sisters, and her instincts were spot-on with the girls. But she never had a brother and doesn't know the drill."

British Prime Minister David Cameron is working to change a law to ensure that if Prince William's first-born child is a girl, she can still be Queen, according to People magazine. Currently, if William and Kate's first child is a daughter but their second is a son, the boy would inherit the throne. "We espouse gender equality in all other aspects of life, and it is an anomaly that in the rules relating to the highest public office we continue to enshrine male superiority," Cameron wrote in a statement.

These celebs could go up a pant size or two

1. "Project Runway" winner Seth Aaron sported ultra, ultra tight skinnys as he visited Short Hills, N.J., last October. Give New Jersey something to talk about, Aaron!

2. Saved by the scarf: Just looking at this photo of Russell Brand at this year's VMA's makes us really uncomfortable.

3. New York-based performance artist Breedlove at a Las Vegas performance last year. It just goes to show for most artists, times really are tight.

4. Adam Lambert tried to tone it down while attending a PFLAG event in California in September, but the seams on his tapered trousers might have been screaming still.

5. It's already a pain to walk in a cast and crutches, so we are utterly baffled at Jessie J's choice to wear these red, incredibly unforgiving pants to the Lil Wayne record release party of "Tha Carter IV" in L.A. in August.

6. Fashion designer Zac Posen looked atypically awkward at New York City's Lincoln Center on Sunday. His posture had nothing to do with the tightness of his jeans. Maybe.

7. Lead vocalist of Thirty Seconds To Mars, Jared Leto, beguiled his fans in Netherlands with his musical talents and various unusual bulges in June of this year.

8. Justin Bieber opted for a more "manly" look and added a black tie and vest to his ensemble of low-waist skinnys. Way to keep it classy.

9. Recording artist Nicki Minaj might be big on success in the hip-hop scene but the camel colored pants she wore to this year's MTV Movie Awards make her hips look just as big.

Hitting the market

► Make room for rutabagas in your shopping bag! ► The award-winning food writer shows us how to shop for (and even cook) in-season produce

► Find Clark's Cumin Seed Roasted Cauliflower with Salted Yogurt, Mint and Pomegranate Seeds recipe at www.metro.us/food. The author says feel free to sub in Romanesco cauliflower instead of the regular kind.

We all aspire to spend weekend mornings strolling the farmers market in search of beautiful produce to whip up into Facebook-worthy meals. But those 40 kinds of greens, 20 varieties of heirloom tomatoes and stalls full of rare veggies (watermelon radishes, anyone?) can be confusing. And then you see apples! Sweet, familiar apples! So you buy a bag and get the hell out. Don't worry — you're not alone.

"Even for seasoned cooks, farmers markets can be really overwhelming," says New York Times

"A Good Appetite" columnist Melissa Clark. "You don't know what the stuff is and you don't know what to buy to go with what, so you end up buying things you're really familiar with, and that's totally fine — but then you get sick of them."

Her new book, "Cook This Now," is filled with 120 easy recipes for in-season produce, as well as sweet personal stories to inspire you out of your "same ol' dinner" food rut. We're not running from the rutabagas anymore after Clark gave us some tips to shop the market like a pro.

Start with your old faves

"Look for things that are familiar but look better than you have seen them, like gorgeous apples — and when I say gorgeous, I don't mean picture-perfect. Look for the coolest looking apples, like Pippin or Honeycrisp instead of Red Delicious, or the niftiest looking cauliflower like Romanesco. This way you're in the realm of the familiar, but it is something more interesting that you couldn't get anywhere else."

SEDGEMILL LLC is pleased to announce that applications are now being accepted for 101 affordable housing rental apartments now under construction at 1610 Sedgwick Ave & 1525 Undercliff Ave, in the Morris Heights section of the Bronx. These buildings are being constructed through the Low-Income Affordable Marketplace Program (LAMP) of the New York City Housing Development Corporation and the Low Income Rental Program (LIRP) of the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development. The site, rents, and targeted income distribution for the 101 apartments are as follows:

Apts. Available	Apartment Size	Household Size*	Monthly Rent	Total Annual Income Range ***

* Subject to Occupancy Criteria.  Includes gas for cooking.  Income guidelines subject to change.

Qualified Applicants will be required to meet income guidelines and additional selection criteria. To request an application, mail a SELF ADDRESSED STAMPED ENVELOPE to: Sedgmill LLC c/o: The Weaverton Management Team, 87-14 118th Street, Richmond Hill, NY 11418, or download from www.sedgmill.com. Completed applications must be returned by regular mail only (no priority, certified, registered, expressmail or overnight mail will be accepted) to a post office box number that will be listed with the application, and must be postmarked by 12/16/11. Applications postmarked after 12/16/11 will be not valid for possible future consideration. Applications will be selected by lottery; applicants who submit more than one application will be disqualified. Disqualified applications will not be accepted. A general preference will be given to New York City residents. Current and eligible members of Bronx Community Board 3 will receive preference for 30% of the units. Eligible households that include persons with mobility impairments will receive preference for 5% of the units; eligible households that include persons with visual and/or hearing impairments will receive preference for 2% of the units; and eligible City of New York Municipal Employees will receive a 5% preference.

"Even for seasoned cooks, farmers markets can be overwhelming."

CLARK

Try something new

"Every time you go to the farmers market, buy one thing that you've never seen before. Even if you don't use it, or you throw it out, at least you bought it and you'll be more familiar with it for next time. And if you don't know what something is, Google it! You'll find a zillion ways to cook it. Also, just ask the farmer."

Pick your farmers

"There are going to be certain stands that you

Look beyond the veggies

"Don't think of farmers markets as just for fruits and vegetables. They have amazing meats and butter, cheese and bread. And eggs! You'll find amazing eggs there. The eggs we get from supermarkets are already 2 weeks old. And eggs last, like, a month. So fresh farmers market eggs will keep for a really long time."

Eavesdrop

"Chances are, when people are talking while shopping at the farmers market, they're talking about what they're going to cook. So I get great cooking tips just by eavesdropping. Sadle up to people who look like they're serious and just see what they're saying and going to buy."

just like better for whatever reason. Not that one is better, but you like the vibe. For me, I like this one stand [Evolutionary Organics] because the woman who works there has cool tattoos. So I'm like, 'I like that place. I am going to go there.'"

In season in October

Clark tells us what to shop for at the farmers market right now:

Tomatoes: "Half-green tomatoes are so good in salads. Don't overlook those."

Grapes: "Fresh grapes taste nothing like the grapes you buy at the supermarket. It's like another world."

Plums: "[You'll get] amazing Italian prune plums. When they get really ripe, they are almost like candy."

Apples and pears:
"They're at their best right now."

What have we learned?

US by numbers: Divided we fall

"CONSERVATIVES LAUNCH 'WE ARE THE 53%' BLOG," CBSNEWS.COM, OCT. 11. Occupy Wall Street forces created the "We Are The 99 Percent" blog to highlight the hardships of suffering Americans. But if OWS truly pitted this supermajority against the "1 Percent" financial elite, we'd be seeing a lot more agreement. Somehow, the math must be off. (Take the conservative response: The "We Are The 53 Percent" blog, which paints protesters as irresponsible whiners.)

Like all things political in the U.S., discussion of OWS has been tainted by the left-right divide, which clouds necessary debate with blind allegiance. But one thing both left and right agree on is that something's gotta give. The right, with its Tea Party movement, thinks the problem lies in government. OWS pushes against the corresponding institution, corporations.

Could be the solution lies somewhere in the middle. Unchecked, corporations would consume the whole world in the name of profit. Likewise, unregulated government breeds corruption.

Add them together and you've got a 100 percent chance of disaster.

Horoscope

► Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Don't waste your time dealing with a subordinate instead of the head honcho, because you must know you're not going to get anywhere. Go directly to the head of the class.

► Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Once you have thought an important decision through, act in accordance with the way you have reasoned things out. Don't yield to an impulsive reaction.

► Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. An imaginative product of your ingenuity may actually have profitable possibilities. If you follow your plans, you have a chance for good results.

► Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Two separate situations in which you're involved might have a chance of fusing together very nicely. It'll be to your advantage to tie them together to see what you can do.

► Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Both your instincts and logic will be operating at full force, so see if you can link them together in order to more greatly enhance your possibilities for success.

► Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. There is a strong possibility that a chance remark made by someone who works in a place where big things are happening will put you onto something substantial. Keep your ears open.

► Aries March 21-April 19. If you're doing reasonably well with your work and seem to be on a roll, don't be too eager to call it a day. Get things done while everything is going your way.

► Taurus April 20-May 20. Don't count your social involvements as wasted hours. You need some interaction with fun people as a break from the harshness of the working world. Make time for them, because they'll lift your spirits.

► Gemini May 21-June 20. Play it cool for best results. Don't disclose the hand you're holding until your counterpart reveals his or hers.

► Cancer June 21-July 22. It might fall to you to mediate a sticky situation between two close friends. Don't back off from this unwanted responsibility if you know you can resolve things.

► Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Don't delay going after an important objective if you believe the favorable conditions you're now experiencing may only be temporary. Strike while the iron is smoking.

► Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. If you think you have a solution that would resolve a misunderstanding between two close friends, speak up. It's important you do so while both parties are in a forgiving mood.

Will the NFL ever stay under?

It's difficult to explain all the scoring going on in the NFL this season.

Theoretically, the lockout should have harmed offenses more than defenses. They didn't have time to work on timing, advanced plays or continuity. All defensive guys have to do is go out there and hit.

Apparently, that's harder than it sounds. Through five weeks, the over has hit in 48 games, and the under has hit 26 times. So if you bet $100 on the over in every NFL game this season, you would be up $1,940. Not bad.

The cold, hard football facts

A look at this weekend's NFL action, through the eyes of the football stat experts at coldhardfootballfacts.com.

The Real QB Rating

Some statistics are more important than others. Cold, Hard Football Facts Insider tracks the importance of many different indicators. And no stat is more useful than "Real QB Rating," which measures all aspects of quarterback play: passing, running, sacks, fumbles and more. (Passer rating measures only passing.)

► Teams that win the Real QB Rating battle are 63-14 (.818) in 2011. It's also incredible 51-26 (.662) at predicting winners. In both cases, it's the most accurate stat in football.

Here's the Real QB matchup for five key games this weekend:

- Buffalo (93.3) at New York Giants (88.6)
- Philadelphia (78.6) at Washington (68.3)
- San Francisco (92.2) at Detroit (97.5)
- Dallas (82.8) at New England (104.2)
- Miami (74.0) at New York Jets (68.0)

Ffchamps.com's 'Start and Sit'

► Start him
The bye week came at the perfect time for Cowboys QB Tony Romo, who gets both his starting WRs back at full strength after some injury issues. He'll have no trouble airing it out against the Patriots defense.

► Sit him
Lions RB Jahvid Best's Week 6 opponent, the San Francisco 49ers, have held opposing RBs to less than 85 yards in five games, and have yet to give up a rushing TD to an RB.

► Jackson ran all over the Eagles last week. Can he do it to another NFC East foe this week?

which doesn't bode well for them because the Bills are not a one-dimensional offense. Quarterback Ryan Fitzpatrick has found a home in Buffalo and is repaying their faith with a stellar season so far (10 touchdowns, four interceptions and 1,233 yards). The real key to the offense, however, is multitalented run-

LINE: Patriots -7
(O/U 55)

KEY INJURIES: RB BenJarvus Green-Ellis (foot) probable. WR Dez Bryant (thigh) probable. DE Jason Hatcher (calf) out. DL Mike Wright (concussion) on IR.

THE SCOOP: The Pats are 4-1 ATS this season, while the Cowboys are 1-2-1. The reason? People love the Cowboys and always bet on them regardless of the season results or spreads. So a 7-point spread could be even larger. New England could be without Jerod Mayo, but their offense will be all intact and you know Tom Brady will be putting up points. One word of caution: Stay away from the largest O/U of the week. Feel confident in taking the Pats to cover, but the 'Boys have a good defense.

NFL news

No Julio

▶ Julio Jones has already been ruled out for Week 6, hinting at a multi-week injury. That means Harry Douglas takes over as starter on a team becoming increasingly pass-happy. Deep league owners should take a flier.

TEBOW TIME: GET EXCITED

There's no gray area when it comes to Tim Tebow. Either you're a hater, or you bow before his mere presence.

But fantasy owners should have a different take on Tebow-mania. He runs, and therefore he is.

Once the Broncos come out of their bye in Week 7, Tebow is going to be a poor real-life quarterback. He is wildly inaccurate, has awful mechanics and can barely even get the ball from center. He'll also be a top-10 fantasy quarterback weekly. Here's why:

Goal-line back

If I told you a running back was going to get all his team's carries inside the 5-yard line and average about 50 yards per game, would you be excited? Now add in about 25 pass attempts per game.

Much like Cam Newton in Carolina, Tebow is going to score rushing touchdowns weekly. Newton is currently fantasy's No. 2 quarterback.

History repeated

This isn't Tebow's first shot in the NFL. He started three games last season, averaging 217.0 yards passing, 66.3 yards rushing and he scored seven all-purpose touchdowns during that stint. That made Tebow fantasy's No. 1 quarterback in that span. So, without further ado, it's Tebow time.

Tim Tebow has overtaken Kyle Orton as Denver's starting quarterback.

Jackie Battle

▶ RB, Chiefs
Battle is far from a special talent, but he's a candidate for 10-15 carries behind an elite run-blocking line.

Greg Little

▶ WR, Browns
Little is now the starting "X" receiver in Cleveland, meaning he'll play every down. Explosive with the ball.

James Jones

▶ WR, Packers
Jones's snap count is on the rise while Donald Driver's is falling off. Jones has the raw ability to be No. 1 WR.

Need to turn your season around? Buy low on these guys:

1 Dez Bryant, WR, DAL — Bryant hasn't been healthy in a game yet this season. Thanks to last week's bye, that's about to change. Megatron-like talent.

2 Chris Johnson, RB, TEN — The Titans' say their No. 1 priority during their bye week is to fix the running game.

3 Vincent Jackson, WR, SD — Jackson has only flashed his dominant potential so far. Philip Rivers is an annual slow starter.

30 million men suffer performance issues: #1 reason is that they are over 50!

Ancient Thailand Root Holds Solution to Premature Performance Decline!

Oregon man credited with bringing "oddly shaped root" to U.S. market; improves blood flow, prostate function and ignites stamina!

A retired Oregon businessman was searching for his own "fountain of youth" when he literally stumbled over a 5,000 year old Asian root that is proving to be the solution to male performance issues. He now leads a team of researchers in bringing this solution to the U.S.

of going and urine flow — and even less getting up during the night to urinate.

"112 Degrees™ is not a sex pill; it is a total body-wellness solution that gives you back a youthful vigor and enhanced performance ability," continues Tallman.

Thailand's Gift to Men

112 Degrees™ contains top-quality, all-natural ingredients such as Tribulus Terrestris, L-Tyrosine, Pueraria, and Avena. Formulated to improve male sexual health and performance, as well as support overall health and vitality. However, one ingredient in the formula can't help but stand out in the group. Butea Superba is a plant indigenous to Thailand, which has a long history of being used there by middle-aged men as a sexual aid.

Emerging Performance Proof

The plant is now the subject of continuing and evolving research around the world that points to its ability to augment sexuality or erectile functioning. Evidence is being collected that Butea Superba has the potential to inhibit the compound that prevents healthy blood flow to the male organs. Subjects also report an increase in energy without an increase in nervous-system stimulation. This translates into an overall better experience.

Health professionals have noted that the "oddly shaped root" may produce benefits such as a significant increase in the weight of the testes, higher sperm counts and a greater release of male sex hormones, which explains the plant's reputation for increasing men's sexuality.

"My husband started taking it because he was experiencing performance irregularities after taking 112 Degrees™. He has no problems. I'm thrilled at the results it provides. It really works!" Christy, AZ.

112 Degrees™ is not a drug or intended to substitute for any prescription drug. Users can expect to experience improved blood flow, better prostate function and a dramatic increase in stamina. Unlike "one-time" performance pills, 112 Degrees™ is taken daily so that your body stays balanced and can perform at youthful levels when needed. It is a total-body revitalization formula.

According to a 2003 article in the Asian Journal of Andrology the preparations of Butea are for male erectile dysfunction. It is affectionately referred to as herbal Viagra.

"Early morning erections have returned. Sustained erections during foreplay have improved. Sustained erections during intercourse. Libido was never much of a problem to begin with. I'm in favor of the gradual natural approach. I am satisfied so far." John, NY

Try A Bottle Free

This non-prescription strength formula can help with sexual health, prostate function and overall performance without side effects by improving and optimizing total body circulation, urinary control and libido function.

LIFE SPAN Labs is sending out the first bottle free as part of a special promotion. Due to supply limitations, the free-bottle offer is open to the first 500 respondents, who will be shipped a risk-free supply of 112 Degrees™ along with free information explaining how it can help you regain peak sexual performance.

► Fewell put Fitzgerald in as quarterback as one of his first moves as Bills head coach.

Fewell: Bills game is just like any other

- Meets team that passed over him
- More concerned with his D now

Two years ago, Perry Fewell was interim head coach of the Bills. He installed Ryan Fitzpatrick as starting quarterback. The team rallied around him and went 3-4 after starting 3-6.

And at the end of the season, the Bills let him go.

Fewell took over as defensive coordinator for the Giants last year and says he has no hard feelings as Buffalo visits MetLife Stadium this week.

"It's been two years and whether I did or didn't [think I'd get the Bills job], I think that's irrelevant," Fewell said. ■ METRO

Fewell said, "I'm happy to be where I am now."

As for any added incentive, Fewell took the high road.

"It's just a game that we have to win," he said. "I just happen to know those guys on the other side though."

Fewell has his own problems.

"My focus is more on us than it is the Buffalo Bills, because we have to learn how to compliment each other and we don't know how to compliment each other at this point in time," Fewell said.

Mason glad to be a Texan

If former Jets wide receiver Derrick Mason has an axe to grind against his former team, he isn't showing it.

"I'm done, I just want to put that behind me as quickly as possible. They can continue to talk about it if they want, but I've got a job to do. I can't worry about what happened in New York," Mason said in his first comments in Houston. "Sometimes you go in with one thought as an organization and then you come out with another."

A knock on Mason with the Jets was he didn't grasp the playbook fast enough.

"We had a chance to go get a guy that still runs very well even though he's played a long time in this league," Texans coach Gary Kubiak said. "He's been very effective in this league and we feel like we can catch him up real fast."

WR Marshall seeks ejection

NFL. The Jets will apparently only have to worry about Brandon Marshall for one quarter Monday.

The always outspoken receiver told the Sun-Sentinel he plans to be ejected — intentionally.

"I'm serious," Marshall said. "They're going to fine me. It's probably going to be like a $50,000 fine. But that quarter and a half that I'm out there, I'm going to play like a monster."

Marshall also said he might get into a fight with Bart Scott or Antonio Cromartie.

MLB names top comebacks

MLB. A former Yankee and a Yankee rival were named MLB Comeback Players of the Year.

Red Sox outfielder Jacoby Ellsbury won in the AL, while Yankee-dud Lance Berkman won in the NL.

"If we don't make it on Tuesday, my gut — this is not in my official capacity of canceling games — but my gut is that we won't be playing on Christmas Day."

NBA. David Stern spoke on the continuing NBA lockout and the word wasn't good. METRO

R U ready for Navy

- Rutgers tops in the Big East at 4-1
- Face always tough triple-option

This was the kind of defense that head coach Greg Schiano envisioned this year — fast, attacking the ball and creating turnovers.

Last season, it was hard to tell how good the Rutgers defense was on a 4-8 team due to the problems on offense. With the offense often folding after a three-and-out, the Rutgers defense was seemingly always on the field. But with a more balanced offense this year, the defense is being asked to simply keep the team in games. Just keeping Rutgers in the game is the request this Saturday as a defense built on speed will face a challenge in stopping a Navy offense that is among the best in the nation at running the ball.

"Looking forward to Navy now, a unique set of challenges. They're running the football better than anybody else in America," head coach Greg Schiano said. "It's a huge challenge because it's a unique offense and one we don't see very much."

The Navy offense is among the most difficult to

Mohamed Sanu, who came to Rutgers as a QB, is averaging 91 yards per game as a receiver, while also taking snaps from the Wildcat.

► Rutgers has Big East wins over Syracuse and Pittsburgh.

The triple-option is utilized by just a handful of teams in college football. And while its known as a rushing offense, they will also lull you into big passing plays.

"They do throw the ball.

One of the things that's lost in this triple-option offense, is Navy counts on hitting in two of those big plays, so we have to make sure we cover," Schiano said.
